Overall Goal of D.O.D.D.

The goal of the DODD curriculum is threefold: 1) To help married couples to start learning about the deeper meaning of why our marriage is so important to our kids, to us and to our connection with God; 2) To help couples to find healing and grace through their marital covenant by giving them tools to communicate more effectively, to deal with conflict resolution more constructively and to seek forgiveness and healing; and 3) To start on the journey of shaping marriages and family life into a model from which others can be inspired to example.

I have learned over the many years directing an organization called Marriage Works! Ohio, that many couples are in desperate need of this type of marriage support and education, but often need encouragement to come to a class. Often, one or the other spouse will come with skepticism and doubt, but more times than I can count, by the third to fourth session, they warm up to the session, and many even become leaders in the discussions. The key is inspiring people to, at least, give it a try. Many couples who receive help in falling back in love with their spouse don't want to go back to the mediocre or even horrible state their marriage was in and long to keep this new-found renewal alive. There are many ways to keep growing in knowledge about relationship building, but the greatest I've found was having couples go on to teach what they've learned.

For this very reason, this curriculum is meant to encourage couples that go through the class, to consider becoming marriage mentors, even if it is for a short time in their lives. As they teach the classes, it forces them to also continue working on their own relationship as they share and teach others. Even if you are not called to "officially" teach marriage enrichment classes to others, you are called to be a light in this world to others around you. Our marriage should be a gift to our spouse, our children and to the world around us. Learn, grow, and shine your light to others!

"Love Connections"

Q3: So what is at the root of this desire to know our spouse? Is it because God wants us to be more than superficial?
4. In the beginning of creation when God made man and woman, He (Gen. 2:7):
➤ God's love is at the core of every Human Being. It is what gives us life, gives us worth, gives us meaning and drives us to live. Since we have the love of God in us, we long to share it with others.
5. We all want to not only love another and share God's love, but we are desperately (whether w know it or not):
6. God loved us into existence without ever needing us and did it out of pure sacrifice, pure generosity, and pure unconditional love. This is what we are called to in marriage. This is the reason our marriage has to be something we are not only willing to, but something for which we are willing to

"The Big No-Know"

"Marriage should be a series of multiple marital commitments; we	7. One of the main reasons we started having problems in our marital relationship is because we:

rather than the mistakes we made together.

➤ Adam and Eve had God's love blown into them, unhindered by sin, and they were fully alive and in love with each other. The love of God within them was freely given to the other person, who freely received and gave their love and life back as this same free gift.
8. Original sin did what to our human relationships:
Q7: Why do opposites tend to attract each other:
9. Our sinful nature (as it did with Adam and Eve) creates:
➤ Because of our sinful nature, we fall back to self-defense and look at the other person's fault
